as we see it

Before we forget about baseball for the year, let's offer some free and only slightly biased advice to Mr. Ford Frick and the baseball club owners: Don't cut down on baseball telecasts, gentlemen.

The evidence from your own research firm, which has answers from 10,000 fans, indicates that there are many reasons besides television that keep them away from the turnstiles.

Certainly you don't need a research firm to tell you that baseball is much more fun when viewed at a ball park than it is on a 21-inch TV screen. But if you watch at home there's no frustrating search for a high-priced parking spot, no surly usher, no overpriced hot dog and soft drink, no uncomfortable seat (the cushion comes extra). And there is escape from the boredom of slow-moving pitchers.

Perhaps those matters should be cleared up before you cut off the Nation's televised baseball.

You enthuse about baseball's appeal to youngsters, and, if anything, baseball is more popular than ever with them. Television can be thanked for that. You tried to whip up baseball enthusiasm from the ladies—but the ladies didn't really respond until television arrived.

We see no reason why all of a team's away-from-home games can't be televised; no reason why most, if not all, of a team's home games can't be televised. Make the stadium, the parking facilities and the prices appealing to the millions of new fans television has made for you and gate receipts will continue to increase.

In the long-range view, your most important job is to keep stimulating interest in baseball, not counting today's receipts. And exposing as many people as possible to baseball—through television—will make the future take care of itself.

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

Last-minute postponement of CBS' Joe and Mabel telefilms, originally scheduled to start Sept. 20, has led to speculation that the show was canceled. But both the producers and CBS still insist there just weren't enough films completed to afford protection in case someone in the cast became ill. Meanwhile, Meet Millie continues in that Tuesday night time period.

ESTHER WILLIAMS will be a guest on Omnibus Oct. 30--to give viewers a swimming lesson, of course . . . Omnibus also readying a dramatization of GEN. BILLY MITCHELL's court martial as one segment of a four-part history of aviation . . . BARRY SULLIVAN signed for the "title" role in A Man Called X, new Ziv telefilm series.

GARRY MOORE adding a "Five Cent Question" feature to his morning show--not as a take-off on The $64,000 Question, but as a "testimonial to the public's generosity instead of its greed," GARRY says . . . GARRY, incidentally, is putting out a new record album titled "Music I Like," in which he sings and plays drums.

Annual Ringling Bros. Circus Christmas party at Sarasota, Fla., will be televised by CBS Friday, Dec. 16. The show will take over the Mama and Our Miss Brooks time periods that night . . . NBC will televise the circus' opening night in New York next spring, in color.

Ever notice that HAL MARCH has a broken nose? Well, the guy who broke it for him was JACKIE GLEASON. HAL guested once on GLEASON's old Cavalcade of Stars, where JACKIE was to hit him on the schnozz with a breakaway bottle. Seems the bottle didn't break away . . . GLEASON scheduled to conduct a dance band at a New York hotel for 10 days early next spring and also may lead the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra in a special concert.

On EDWARD R. MURROW's list for a future Person to Person visit--HAROLD MINSKY, the burlesque impresario . . . Either CONNIE RUSSELL or RHONDA FLEMING will play the lead in Adventures of a Model, new telefilm series.

You may see comedian RED BUTTONS in some serious dramatic roles this season. RED got his TV start as an actor on the old Danger series . . . Still another Western series in the works, but this one probably won't be the adult type. It's to be titled Adventures of Zane Grey, based on the late novelist's many books.

WILL ROGERS, JR. expected to take over as roving host of CBS' revamped hour-long Morning Show. It will follow the kiddies' Captain Kangaroo, which moves up to 7 A.M. (E.T.) . . . A telefilm series being readied based on cartoonist BILL MAULDIN's "Willie and Joe" characters.

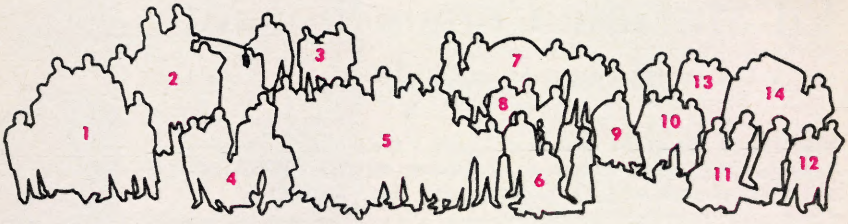
95 PEOPLE WERE NEEDED TO PUT A DRAMA ON THE AIR



1. Camera crew, three men for each of four cameras. 2. Sound men, two for eacn of four booms and a man in control booth. 3. Electricians and set changers. 4. Director, assistant and floor manager. 5. Cast. 6. Producer and aides. 7. Commercial production unit. 8. Publicity. 9. Art director. 10. Make-up experts. 11. Story department. 12. Guest relations. 13. Prop men. 14. Wardrobe department. (The sign is part of the show's regular commercial.)

The play was "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" on the Climax! series. Viewers saw five principals and more than a score of supporting players and extras on their screens. But what no one saw —in one place, at any rate—were all those needed to get the show on the air. Here they are, all 95, assembled by TV GUIDE in Los Angeles to demonstrate what an immense and complicated business is the production of just one television program.

Ed Murrow Comes To Call

By Amy Vanderbilt

Miss Vanderbilt is the author of "Amy Vanderbilt's Complete Book of Etiquette," writes a syndicated newspaper column and conducts her own TV program, It's Good Taste.

Just in case Ed Murrow decides to call on you, let me warn you. First, he doesn't ask you. You find out about his plans in alarming ways.

Way back in February, I arrived home one evening to find my household in an uproar. A large sound truck had pulled up in my driveway that morning and had made a careful tour of my house and grounds. A man with a movie camera had gone through the house. To my housekeeper's weak protests (she recognized the magic of the initials "CBS") the truck's crew responded, "Oh, we're from Ed Murrow and he knows Miss Vanderbilt." He does, but I didn't expect him so informally.

We sat on tenterhooks for months. We read items in the papers from time to time—for example, that the electric company had granted CBS permission to tap the main power line for the broadcast—but heard nothing from our guest, himself.

As the TV winter season began drawing to a close, I felt safer. Ed obviously wasn't coming until fall.

Then, just 10 days before I went coast to coast with 15,000,000 people crowding into my living room, I ran into Ed Murrow in New York. "I understand you've been out my way," I squeaked. "Yes, I have," he replied with that enigmatic smile. Three days later came the bombshell. "If the telephone company can get the tower up in time, you're on next Friday." They could and I was.

On the Saturday before the Friday broadcast, telephone men arrived and began wiring my trees, setting up a communications center in the garage and, somewhere back of my acreage, setting up a 30-foot tower. In fact, they wired just about everything but the children.

On Wednesday a researcher arrived and spent the afternoon. He reported to Murrow that Paul had acquired a black eye playing ball with his Little League. "For heaven's sake, preserve it," laughed Murrow (and Paul and his shiner did steal the show).

On Friday at 1 P.M., 18 members of Murrow's crew arrived. There were others, too—among them the producer, the assistant producer and "grips" to move the furniture and clean up afterwards (very nicely, too).

My house is large, but the Murrow equipment is enormous. The family and I had our dinner upstairs in the bedroom—the only place for us. The crew was going to knock off for supper—out—but a thunderstorm made that a poor idea, so we set up a buffet. Eighteen pounds of ham, 10 of hamburgers, 40 doughnuts, quarts of coleslaw, a half dozen loaves of rye bread, five pounds of cheese and several gallons of coffee disappeared. It's lucky we had the freezer.

There is a Murrow crew man in charge of hazards, like cats. We have four mother cats and 13 babies, a rabbit and a bloodhound. This Murrowman, a charming Turk named Ridvav Gogen, told us that while the kittens and the rabbit could be on the show in their baskets, the mother cats would have to be locked up, because they persisted in removing the kittens and might get under the cameras, which were on dollies.

At 5:30 P.M., a nice man came up to my bedroom, where I was being made up by a CBS make-up man, and equipped me for sound with batteries, wires and a tiny microphone about the size of a quarter.

Afterward I walked through the rooms set up for the show—rooms whose floors were carefully protected by canvas and flooded with light. Camera angles were studied, sound levels taken, instructions given to all involved (don't talk over your shoulder, the mike won't pick up your voice; don't walk backward, it looks peculiar to the audience; don't speak too rapidly). Shiny objects, like my tea service, are sprayed with something like rubber cement or removed.

Did I see Murrow at my house? No, I didn't. There is no monitor for the guidance of the interviewee. He is instructed not to look into the camera with the red light, but to the right of the camera. Ed's voice comes in over a speaker about an hour before the broadcast for a little chat, then disappears until just before air time.

In our house, because of the power problem, every appliance, including the electric coffee maker, and all upstairs lights were turned off.

When it's all over, Ed returns to your house on a closed circuit. He will tell you it was one of his best shows (no matter what) and thank you for letting him visit you. Don't think it's over. The crew remains—well, in my case it did—until 3 A.M., packing up. And, in spite of State police guard, floods of neighbors beat their way through to us.

For weeks afterward you will be answering your fan mail—and later Ed sends you any of his mail which mentions you. As a final memento, you get a kinescope of the show on 16 millimeter sound film, so you can see for yourself—and your grandchildren can see, too—just how you really were on Person to Person.

'Big Town's' Big Boss

Actor Mark Stevens Writes, Directs And Produces TV Series

Perhaps the most quietly effective operator in TV these days is a movie actor named Mark Stevens who, just a year ago, signed a routine contract to star in 39 episodes of Big Town. When he replaced Pat McVey as Steve Wilson, managing editor of The Illustrated Press, Trudy Wroe was signed to play the paper's "sob sister," Lorelei.

Although no one knew it then, Stevens' signature on the contract was a death warrant for the accepted format of Big Town, for Miss Wroe's job and for the production company which was turning out the film series.

Before Stevens entered the picture, Big Town, which launches a new series on NBC Tuesday, was a routine cops-and-robbers show in which the managing editor and the girl reporter were forever chasing after gangsters and replating Page One.

Stevens, who originally went into the acting business for the sole purpose of saving money to buy a newspaper of his own, began to edit offscreen as well as on. His first target: the show's directors.

"They were hiring minimum-rate directors," he claims, "and so we were getting minimum-rate performances. When I squawked once too often, they said, 'Well, why don't you direct it yourself?' So all of a sudden I was a director."

Stevens' next point of attack was the script department. He didn't agree that a managing editor is a Sam Spade in disguise, complete with a cute doll as a sidekick. "A sob sister," he explains, "just didn't fit." That spelled "Exit" for Trudy.

By midseason, actor-director Stevens was a writer, too, and the results were beginning to show.

The managing editor had calmed down into a newspaperman with a civic conscience. The sob sister had disappeared. The stories were pegged on actual civic problems, dramatizing the power of the press in helping lick them. Sample subjects: the employment problem faced by men over 40, the black-market traffic in blood plasma, crookedness in the boxing business, the low pay of school teachers.

Inevitably, there were squawks. The production company, seeing control of a good property gradually slipping out of its hands, demanded a showdown with the sponsor. ("They hate Stevens' guts over there," a trade paper reporter said recently, "but how can you quarrel with success? The guy has been right in every move he's made. This is the most improved show on the air.")

The sponsor, Lever Brothers, chose to side with Stevens. "I guess they liked what they saw," the actor says. "Anyway, they told me they wanted me to produce the show. I offered a partnership deal to the production company, but they apparently didn't want in on that basis."

Big Town is now being produced at a new studio by Mark Stevens Productions. He has a firm acting-producing-directing deal for 39 films.

Stevens is looking for a girl to portray the managing editor's girl friend. "Lorelei," he says firmly, "is dead. But we do need a girl, and I think it best to cast her as Steve Wilson's love interest. She probably won't appear in every episode, at least not at first. She'll be a commercial artist, or something along that general line."

He's planning shows on immigration problems, teen-age gangs and other civic headaches—and one on the current rash of so-called "expose" magazines. "We should have a lot of fun with that one," he grins.

He's also looking around for a second TV film series and motion picture properties for his new company. "I guess I'm in business," he says. "Lot of work cut out for me." Asked about his health, Stevens scratches his head ruefully. "Well," he admits, "I force myself to carry $750,000 worth of life insurance. Let's put it that way."

Back To Work. George Gobel, above, returns tonight (Saturday). $64,000 Question alumnus Gino Prato faces TV cameras again tonight as Perry Como's guest. Alistair Cooke and Omnibus begin fourth year Sunday. Bishop Sheen switches to ABC Thursday.

TV GUIDE PREVIEWS

SHOWS THIS WEEK

Who's doing what on your TV screen during the next seven days? Here, in a pictorial report, is part of the answer. Old favorites will return; others, already back, will be up to new tricks, and there will be at least two spectaculars—one, "Show Biz," stressing the past; the other, "1976," the future.

John Wayne Guests. Lucille Ball, trapped in film star's dressing room in Monday's instalment of I Love Lucy, pretends that she's George, Wayne's masseur. Lucy's in a jam after trying to swipe cement cast of a footprint.

New Cast, New Locale. Friday's Our Miss Brooks episode, the second of the new series, will find Eve Arden & Co. moving from Madison High to Mrs. Nestor's Private Elementary School. Bob Sweeney, formerly of My Favorite Husband, portrays Oliver Munsey, Mrs. Nestor's brother and the school's vice principal. Their tin friend is one Oscar, who specializes in sharpening pencils.

Nostalgia. Groucho Marx heads a big cast (Eartha Kitt, Dennis Day, Bert Lahr) in "Show Biz" Sunday.

Baby Expert. Dr. Benjamin Spock, authority on baby care, launches an NBC program on Sunday afternoon.

RCA Victor Everest Deluxe. Mahogany grained finish (24D655). $349.50.

Liberace

Emerson

Philadelphia Dateline

You can expect to see Glenn Derringer, the 11-year-old musical genius from West Oak Lane, on a future showing of the Mouseketeers segment of Ch. 6's Mickey Mouse Club. The young organist has returned home after making the film in Hollywood with his sister.

Hal March, emcee of The $64,000 Question, is due to visit our town later this month. He'll appear at a United Community Campaign luncheon.

Also heading this way is pianist Liberace and brother George, seen on Ch. 3 and 8. They'll be here on Monday, Nov. 7, in connection with their new movie, "Sincerely Yours."

TV's Faye Emerson is skipping all video activity while on tour with "The Heavenly Twins," now in Philadelphia.

A behind-the-scenes story of the numbers game operation here will be told when Ch. 3's Tele-Scope resumes on Saturday, Oct. 8, at 7 P.M. The former Telerama series under a new name, the show's camera crews have been covering police raids locally for 10 days.

Now that Tom Moorehead has selected the area's prettiest secretary on Ch. 6's Morning Theater show, he's accepting nominations for the prettiest waitress. Mrs. Julia Tracy, 113 Eutaw Ave., Camden, won the first contest.

There's more football in store for Ch. 12 viewers. The station has booked the College Game of the Week, for Wednesdays at 9 P.M., with Tom Harmon narrating. Complete films of all Philadelphia Eagles games, home and away, are being seen Mondays at 10:50 P.M. with Bosh Pritchard commenting.

The monthly Young at Heart award given on Ch. 10's Children's Hour will go to Mrs. Grace Robertson on Sunday, Oct. 9, at 11:30 A.M. A representative of the Pennsylvania Society to Protect Children from Cruelty, she was nominated for the honor by two of her charges. They'll be on hand Sunday.

An audience participation show for the youngsters is due with Carny's Cartoons starting Saturday, Oct. 8 at 10 A.M. Jack Valentine and Carny C. Carny will mingle with the visitors.

Chief Halftown, who took up bowling only two years ago and now rates as an expert, is now tutoring Ch. 6 personnel in the sport.

EDUCATION IN YOUR LIVING ROOM

VIDEO UNIVERSITY IS BACK IN SESSION ON CH. 6 DAILY

PMC's Dr. Russell Erb demonstrates a chemical reaction for viewers at home.

School bells are ringing again for television viewers. That means The University of the Air has resumed classes on Ch. 6 each weekday at 11:15 A.M.

The Nation's first adult education series on TV, the program has provided thousands of persons with instruction in such varied fields as Spanish, chemistry, government, history, child psychology, home budgeting, economics.

From this semester's roster, you'll be able to learn about "Internal Medicine" from faculty members at Jefferson Medical College. Ursinus College will offer a course on "Japan and China." The Penn State Ogontz Center plans "Management Workshop."

If you're interested in the cultural development in painting, architecture and sculpture, you'll find the Tuesday class, "These Are Our Own," as presented by Lehigh University, to your liking. On the family side, Rider College will give a Wednesday course in "Marriage and the Family."

Political geography students will find examples close to home in "Development of Delaware Valley, U. S. A.," being presented Wednesday by Glassboro State Teachers College. The University of Pennsylvania will keep you up with the news in its course, "The World Behind the News."

For students of Greek drama, Temple University has booked a Friday course on the subject, while the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science is offering "Look to Your Health" on the same day.

PMC's Dr. Russell Erb, who made his TV debut when the series began in 1951, continues his record of continuous service this term. He's offering a course in cosmetic chemistry for the ladies—"Let's Make Up."

The Chester prof finds the TV teaching assignment highly interesting because it attracts such a wide cross-section of the community. "People want to learn and they don't need any credits to tune in our classes. They like education mixed with a little humor," he noted.

Dr. Erb believes that commercial TV will continue to do a better job with teaching than the educational outlets, when they come into their own. "The commercial stations know how to make it interesting for the viewers," he said.

As with all television shows, the viewers always write. Dr. Erb, a native of Bethlehem, finds that, while he gets more mail from the ladies than the men, he draws a good response from two male groups: clergymen and bartenders. He doesn't offer any reason for this varied interest.

Dr. Erb looks forward to color television. He believes that when he can show chemical reactions in color, they'll be a big hit.

Subject matter for the video university is selected by a panel of six members representing the more than 25 participating institutions, and a station representative. Before classes begin each semester, Ch. 6 conducts a short course on the operation of television for the professors.

Is there an agent from the Internal Revenue office at the $64,000 Question program to collect the federal income tax due from the contestants?—Richard A. Heller, West Reading, Pa. [No, but have no fear about Uncle Sam being cheated. The office of the District Director of Internal Revenue, Philadelphia, said the producers or sponsors make a report of the amount paid to contestants in the same manner employers notify the government of money received by employes. Contestants file their tax returns in the normal manner, as will $64,000 winner McCutchen.]

Please tell me what happened to Jean Corbett, who was on Ch. 10's Home Highlights show.—Mrs. C. Bellanca, Reading, Pa. [Miss Corbett has left the station but is doing some free-lance work. She is also doing some script writing for a midwest station.]

4:30 (3) 1976 — LIFE IN THE FUTURE

Dave Garroway • Sid Caesar • Nanette Fabray • Arlene Francis • Wally Cox

SPECIAL What will life be like for the average American in the year 1976? No one knows, and this program doesn't attempt to say.

Garroway

What it does try to depict is what life could be like, given peace and reasonable conditions for progress. The year 1976 marks the 200th anniversary of the founding of the U.S., and scientists expect that advancement during the next 21 years will be as revolutionary as the accomplishments of the last 55. Today's show was suggested by a book written by NBC prexy Sylvester L. Weaver. It features Dave Garroway as emcee, and a musical score composed and conducted by Al Goodman.

Transportation. Trains, planes, subways and autos of the future. As an auto salesman Wally Cox shows some future sales methods.

Fabray

Home Products. Arlene Francis is seen as a community welcome lady, introducing locally distributed products to new residents.

Machines and People. Will machines eliminate the familiar ways of behaving? Sid Caesar and Nanette Fabray do a sketch showing a good old-fashioned quarrel between a 1976 commuter and his wife. Seems wifey has smashed up the family helicopter. (Film)

Caesar

Other fields covered include jobs (the jobs of 1976 involve less drudgery, are more creative), recreation and education, television (an entire wall becomes a TV screen; there's shopping by video), kitchen gadgets (wall cabinets have adjustable temperatures), sports (water skiers spread out their artificial wings and take off!) and homes (built high).

CREDITS . . . Producer: Ben Park. Director: Lynwood King. Consultant: Victor Gruen.

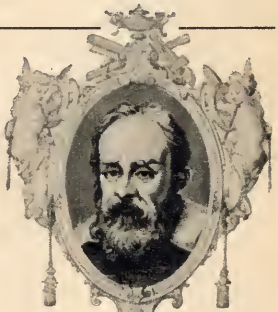
THE RENAISSANCE
birth of modern times



Galileo

Lorenzo

Leonardo

RETURN Alistair Cooke is again the suave host as Omnibus returns to its weekly spot as a 90-minute cultural-variety program.

The opening show is entirely devoted to a dramatic panorama of the Renaissance, the period that marked the emergence of modern man onto the stage of history. Acting as our guide is one Nicolo, resident of Florence in the year 1492. That is the year the show concentrates on, and Italy is the place. Nicolo is a representative figure of the era—the "universal man,"—man of the world, politician, poet, scholar.

Nicolo tours Florence with the cameras in tow. Along the way he takes part in some of the action and encounters some of the titanic figures of the age. Among the people introduced: Michelangelo, Raphael, Leonardo, Galilea, Botticelli, Titian, Savonarola and two less familiar faces, Sweynheym and Pannartz, who opened cultural frontiers by delivering the printing press to Italy. Dominating the city of Florence is Lorenzo the Magnificent, himself typifying the universal man—astute political schemer, gifted poet, patron of the arts. Contrasted with Lorenzo Medici is Ferdinand of Naples, who lacked Lorenzo's breadth of talent.

Music and dance will be a part of this pageant of the dawn of the humanistic age. The script is by magazine writer Robert Coughlan.

TV GUIDE RATINGS

	Rating	Bouts	W	L	D	KO's
Perez	10	40	33	6	1	13
Courchesne	Unrated	40	35	3	2	15

This will be the big test for the up-and-coming Courchesne. In his last bout he impressed with a knockout win over Sonny Puleo. Perez has fought all the top men in the division and is a good boxer-puncher. It will be a battle of Perez's speed and skill against Courchesne's punch and determination.

Some New Faces

Why can't we get some young people on TV? Milton Berle, Jimmy Durante, Martha Raye and Eddie Cantor are coasting on their names. They are run down—and so are their jokes.—S. R. Durrett, Philadelphia. [How about George Gobel, Jackie Gleason, Johnny Carson?—ED.]

Cantor

Colman

Old Favorites Missed

There seem to be very few of the former good entertainment programs on TV during the week. Shows like Ronald Colman's Halls of Ivy, and Jamie.—Mrs. M. Thomas, Bethayres, Pa.

Too Useful?

The Mariners (July 30 issue) are quoted as saying they outlived their usefulness on the Godfrey show. This is not true. They were becoming too useful and stealing some of the thunder.—Name withheld on request.

Another Precinct Reports

In your Letters to the Editor column (Aug. 20 issue) you had a letter from a lady who tuned in Tulsa, Okla. I tuned it in on Ch. 2. The call letters were KVOO.—Fred Connor, Parkesburg, Pa.

How Gracie Gets That Way

GEORGE BURNS, WRITERS REVEAL IT ISN'T EASY

Three days a week, 9 A.M. to 3 P.M., a fellow named George Burns presides over a sort of sanity hearing. With Burns as judge (and a natty judge indeed, sports shoes polished to a high luster, a long cigar between his fingers and often a snap-brimmed cap pulled down to his ears), four writers take turns testifying as to the mental processes of one Gracie Allen. As everyone within reach of a TV set knows by now, she's batty as a coot. The problem: what to do with her.

Opinions vary. One of the writers came in one day with his recommendation jotted down in seven words: "Gracie gets a summons to jury duty." It was unanimously adopted, the necessary papers were drawn up and sentence was carried out on a Monday night over the CBS network. But it is not always so easy. In fact, Burns and his staff, trying to reach a decision, once turned the guests of an entire hotel into the street in nightclothes.

This was back in the days of radio, when George and the writers were given to working in hotels until 5 A.M. in the belief that fatigue promoted genius. It seems that one of the writers was hard of hearing. Burns was trying to work up a joke in which Gracie woke in the night and smelled fire, but the writer didn't get it. Exasperated, George leaned over him and shouted: "She smells fire! Fire! Fire!" A few minutes later the corridor outside the room filled up with firemen. A guest, not hard of hearing, had turned in an alarm.

"In those days," Burns says, "the script conferences were almost as funny as the show."

Today at McCadden Productions, where Burns and Allen scripts are assembled, the fireworks are mostly mental, the proceedings on the dignified side. "If you scratch," says Harvey Helm, a veteran who has been writing Burns and Allen scripts for 18 years, "everybody looks at you." The demands of TV humor, Burns believes, are so stringent that the production of 40 scripts a year is best approached with businesslike respect.

Writing for Gracie is a business that goes on seven days a week, virtually 24 hours a day. The three days a week devoted to conferences, at which a young clerk named Tommy Clapp types the script up line by line, are only the part of the iceberg that shows. The writers—Helm, Keith Fowler, Norman Paul and Willie Burns, George's brother—work on individual scenes, either at home or in the office, evenings, Saturday, Sundays and the two days a week when the show is filming.

"Any writer can write jokes," Burns observes, "but jokes that fit Gracie—that's different. Fowler," he adds, "came to work for me off the Ken Murray show and his first script had Gracie smoking cigars."

Burns and Allen returned to TV last week, after a summer of re-runs, with a script written back in the spring before the writers went on vacation—a Burnsian monument of forethought in a business that traditionally leaves everything important to the last minute. It was cut and polished between 9 A.M. and 3 P.M. on the first Monday in August when the writing staff returned. The original script, for example, had Burns standing beside the train on which he and Gracie were leaving for New York, and telling a monolog joke.

Last spring it was decided to have the engineer blow the train whistle and drown out the last line of the joke. Then George could say:

"I got to get rid of that engineer. He didn't wait for my laugh." And get back on the train.

By August that idea had paled. So Burns decided to tell a really funny joke this time and get back on the train. Lighting a fresh cigar, he told one about two men named Brown who meet in a bar and discover they live at the same address; but he discarded it midway in favor of a joke about a man who enters a bar with a talking mouse in his pocket. "No," he decided, "that's no good either, but a bar joke is what I want." For twenty minutes he puffed his cigar until he came up with the right one.

"That's it," he decided quietly.

The principal subject of these proceedings, incidentally, is never present. In the old Plaza Hotel days, while George and his writers worked through the night, Gracie was home in bed. These days, 9 A.M. to 3 P.M., except when rehearsing or filming, she can be found beside the family pool.

Which in itself is quite a comment on that sanity hearing. Who, when you come right down to it, is batty?

Diana Lynn Wiggles In And Out Of 20 Costumes In 52 Minutes

To Diana Lynn, struggling through 20 costume changes in 52 minutes for U.S. Steel Hour's "The Seventh Veil," every woman's pleasant dream of lots and lots of clothes soon became a nightmare. The quick-change routine was necessary because her life—from 14-year-old schoolgirl to famed musician and, finally, would-be suicide—was told in flashbacks. In films, cameras can be stopped for such activities, but not on a live TV show. Four wardrobe women, two make-up men and a hairdresser pitched in to aid the actress. At that, stand-ins were needed in a couple of scenes to give her time to get dressed.

REVIEWS

Wyatt Earp

Besides the giveaway show craze, TV has launched another new program cycle this season with its so-called "adult Westerns." First to be offered up was ABC's Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp. If the others are as good, adult viewers will become as Western-conscious again as they were back in their own childhood days.

Earp's exploits as a frontier marshal were so crammed with gun-slinging action, suspense and excitement that a producer could hardly go wrong in basing a show on his life. But this series has added features that make it a winner. Hugh O'Brian is near-perfect in the title role. The scripts by author-playwright Frederick Hazlitt Brennan adhere to reality, with only an occasional foray into fiction. There is little phony romance to clutter up the action.

The show picked up Earp's life when he arrived at Ellsworth City, Kan., to start his career as a peace officer. It was there he had his first run-in with the outlaw Thompson brothers, and his innate sense of psychology in playing on the emotions of the older brother to trap the younger was excellently depicted. As Marshal Earp, O'Brian also gets plenty of chance to prove his quick-on-the-draw technique.

O'Brian is a lean, handsome actor, who might conceivably nudge Fess Parker's Davy Crockett out of his favorite position with the kids and who most certainly will appeal to women. He strikes just the right note with his portrayal, avoiding the sham heroics and adding bits of humor to lighten the taut action.

(Editor's note: Interestingly enough, Welcome Ann Earp, of TV GUIDE's St. Louis editorial department, is a distant cousin of Marshal Earp. She has made an exhaustive study of his life and says she believes the program could be more accurate, and that she thinks Earp was more "taciturn and serious" than he is depicted.)

Supporting players are good, including Alan Dinehart III, as young Bat Masterson, and Hal Baylor and Denver Pyle as the Thompsons. Producer Lou Edelman has lavished great skill and care on all production mountings, including authentic-looking sets, costumes and fine background music.

It Pays To Be Married

Take a little of almost every daytime giveaway show on TV, shake well, and you come up with something like NBC's It Pays To Be Married. Slanted for the housewife audience each Monday-through-Friday afternoon, the show has overtones of The Big Payoff, Strike It Rich, On Your Account and even the nighttime This Is Your Life and You Bet Your Life. As with most such shows, it doesn't add much luster to TV, but it does interest its quota of viewers.

On each show, emcee Bill Goodwin interviews two married couples, selected because some human-interest story is involved in their courtship or married life. These stories range from tear-jerkers (a nurse fell in love with and married her paraplegic GI patient) to comedy (a college girl spotted her ideal marching in a parade, then chased him until she corralled him). After they tell their stories, each couple gets a chance to answer a pair of questions for the usual merchandise payoff.

The questions are seldom difficult. Whichever couple answers faster gets a chance at a cash jackpot puzzler.

THE YOUNGER SET

LOVES TV

Mother Goose certainly has had to take a back seat to Davy Crockett and other television characters in the past year. Nowhere is the impact more evident than in the realm of toys and costumes designed for the younger set. Some of the more popular outfits and accessories, available coast to coast, are, left to right: Pinky Lee get-up, with TV camera; Superman, with muscle-building set; Ramar of the Jungle, complete with gun and stuffed tiger; Gene Autry boots, vest, chaps, hat and guitar; Davy Crockett dress for girls (in brown), with Annie Oakley sewing kit. Then there's the blue Annie Oakley costume, with white smoke-gun; Tinkerbell dress and Tinkerbell doll; Donald Duck outfit; Clarabell, with a Howdy Doody beach ball, and Dale Evans costume, with rocking horse. Many basic outfits, which will turn any little boy or girl into a reasonable facsimile of a TV idol, can be bought for about $2. It's the accessories—just as in the more adult automobile business—that run the price up.

Jack Webb Will Continue As Cop; Loretta Young Wants To Act, Too

HOLLYWOOD . . . Jack Webb's decision to continue starring in the Dragnet series is based on the rather unfavorable reaction to his "Pete Kelly's Blues" movie. Earlier, Jack had planned to play Pete on TV and have someone else take over his Dragnet chores. . . . Someone suggested to Loretta Young that she could return to work sooner if she would only be hostess on her TV show, without playing roles. "It's cheating," said Loretta. "A hostess, after greeting her guests, should have fun with them."

■ Quotes: Milton Berle, between rehearsals: "I love living in Hollywood—every once in a while the fog lifts high enough so you can see the smog." . . . Judy Garland: "Let's face it: I didn't care whether I did TV or not, but I sure can use that $100,000!"

■ There's a big problem in the Bob Crosby family—over daughter Cathy's TV career. Bob wants the 17-year-old charmer to finish her schooling, but it's tough to convince her when she receives $300 for brief TV spots. Cathy is feeling her oats. The only one who can squelch her these days is cousin Gary. . . . Another TV star's child—18-year-old Jack Linkletter—has entered the University of Southern California. . . . And his sister, Dawn, 16, told me before my stint on papa Art's House Party: "We're all going into television. We're going to beat the Crosbys. But nothing serious until after college."

■ Mickey Rooney, visiting the Buffalo Bill, Jr. set, told the director he would like to make a Western. Visiting fireman Dick Powell added, "I have just the title for it—'Short in the Saddle.'"

■ The Frontier series required some skinny cows for a scene. After searching all over California without spotting one, the make-up department painted ribs on some fat rented cows. . . . HOLLYWOOD Dan Jenkins reports:

Under a Government decree, Republic has agreed to release a majority of its old--and some comparatively new--features to TV. Decree was a formality, for Republic has long since released 80 percent of its pictures to the new medium. Other major studios, however, are still under suit by the Government for alleged conspiracy in withholding their films. Their argument: The resultant flood of pictures would glut the market and drive the price down to mere peanuts.
